The Name of Lincoln.

There's a name that brings a picture
Of a man great souled and grand:
One whose deeds on history's pages,
Carved in bold relief shall stand.

There's a name that brings a picture
Of a time when blood was shed.
When the boom of cannon sounded
And the star of War was red.

There's a name that brings a picture
Of a shackled race set free,
Brought from out the ban of bondage
To the joys of liberty.

There's a name that brings a picture
Of a nation bowed in woe,
For the hand of an assassin
Laid a noble spirit low.

'T is the name of martyred Lincoln
Calls these pictures from the past,
And that name with the Immortals
Shall endure while earth shall last.

Lincoln Analyzed.

There is something in Washington or in Lincoln or Grant that defies analysis. It is a moral elevation, a magnanimity, a nobleness and profoundness of mind. It is force of character and ability by which man is able to meet great emergencies. This is true greatness.

Nothing discloses real character like the use of power. If you wish to know what a man really is, give him power. This is the supreme test.

Judged by this standard, Abraham Lincoln stands out one of the purest, grandest and noblest characters of all time. Greatness was never more unconscious of itself than it was in him. It consisted in the fact that he made mistakes but rose above them.

Lincoln was a man of marvelous growth The statesman or the military hero born and reared in a log cabin is a familiar figure in American history; but we may search in vain among our men of honor and fame for one whose origin and early life equaled Abraham Lincoln's in obscurity and lack of education.

He sprang from the poorest class in the border south. Hard work was his early lot; his education a minus factor. In the year of his majority his father moved to Illinois. Here Lincoln began for himself the hard battle of life. He became an ambitious young man. Unquestionably in some mysterious way, he arrived at the conclusion that this world had something far higher for him than neighborhood joker, champion wrestler or prize wood chopper.

A lawyer lent him a copy of Blackstone and he commenced the study of law; was admitted to the bar in 1836; rose rapidly in his profession and became an eminent lawyer. Being more adapted to the part of a jurist than an advocate, owing to the striking uprightness of his character, he applied himself to this branch of his profession, and it may truly be said that his vivid sense of truth and justice had much to do with his effectiveness as a jurist. When he felt himself to be the protector of innocence, the defender of justice, or the prosecutor of wrong, he frequently disclosed such unexpected resources of reasoning, such depth of feeling, and rose to such fervor of appeal as to astonish and overwhelm his hearers, and make his appeal irresistible.

He continued to "ride the circuit," read books, tell funny stories to his fellow lawyers in the tavern, chat familiarly with his neighbors and become more and more widely known, trusted and beloved among the people of his State for his ability as a lawyer and politician, for the integrity of his character and the ever-flowing spring of sympathetic kindness in his heart. His main ambition was that of political distinction, yet no one, at the time, would have suspected that he was the man destined to lead the nation through the greatest crisis of the century.

Nevertheless, he was growing, indeed, this is one prominent fact in Lincoln's life—he never ceased growing. As captain in the Black Hawk war, as a candidate for the legislature, as storekeeper, postmaster, surveyor and law student, he was always growing.

In 1846 he was elected to Congress where he distinguished himself as a humorous speaker and rapidly advanced to the front as a statesman.

Lincoln was a statesman in the truest and grandest sense of the word. He was a type of honesty and moral integrity. He had a conscience "void of offense toward God, and toward men" A lover of the truth, men learned to trust him. He was just, and for that reason would not put upon others that which he would not put upon himself. He studied the questions of the day and founded his opinons on truth and justice.

It was not until 1854, when the slavery question had been thrust into politics as the paramount issue, that Lincoln's powers were aroused to their fullest capacity. He plunged into arduous study of the question, in its legal, historical and moral aspects, until his mind became a complete arsenal of argument.

Now he was able to cope with any political antagonist. The time had come when the Republican party required a man to put forward as their standard bearer one who would be equal for the coming election.

They found in Lincoln all the antecedents of his life to be such as to produce in him the rarest qualifications for the Presidency, to which he was now called by his party. It was during this canvass that he first revealed, in his great debates with Stephen A. Douglas, the full scope of his originality and genius. Subsequent to this combat of giants, he was duly elected President.

No President, before or since, ever took his seat under such difficulties The situation which confronted him was appalling—secession of the Southern States was fully organized, and less than a month before his inauguration seven of them had already seceded.

During his inaugural address he declared his fixed purpose to uphold the Constitution and preserve the integrity of the Union. It was his policy to ignore the action of the seceded States as a thing in itself null, void and of no effect.

Lincoln was the man whom Providence placed at the head of the nation in the supreme hour of its destiny. When he assumed the reins of government he was surround by traitors. The government was without army, without navy, without credit. He spoke, and two millions of men sprang, as from the ground. He breathed, and the bosom of the ocean was covered with ships of war. He placed his hand upon Wall Street and the credit of the goverment was secured. He surrounded himself with the best and truest counselors of the time.

He signed his name and the shackles fell from the limbs of four million of slaves. His was a greatness for the time. He was the Moses of a new dispensation—called of God to lead the hosts of captives out of the bondage house of their oppression. Like his great prototype he was not permitted to see the land of promise. He led the people safely through, but he was not allowed to guide them across the Jordan.

On the morning of April 15, 1865, God called Abraham Lincoln away from mortal sight.

Measured by what he did as a statesman and leader, he stands head and shoulders above all rulers of men in the annals of the six thousand years of human history.

While a "solitary stripe remains in our banner," while a "single star is blazoned on its field of blue," so long will the deeds, the heroism and the loyalty of Abraham Lincoln be told to generations yet unborn —Lincoln Stories by J. E. Gallaher.

Lincoln's Speech at Gettysburg

Delivered at the dedication of the Gettysburg National Cemetery on the Gettysburg Battlefield, November 19, 1863.

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow, this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

Lincoln and Worden.

A Lincoln story which has perhaps never before been printed is told by one who had it from the lips of Rear-Admiral John L. Worden, who, as lieutenant, commanded the Monitor in its fight with the Merrimac

When the Monitor was in process of construction, there was considerable discussion at Washington as to who should command it As the vessel was in so many ways an experimental craft, it was felt to be not entirely a proper thing to order any one to take charge of it, and the idea of calling for volunteers was considered A friend of Lieutenant Worden, however, suggested his name He was asked if he would take the command, and he gladly accepted it.

When he had made the emergency run from New York, on the receipt of news that the Merrimac was destroying the Union fleet, and after he had defeated the Confederate ironclad, Lieutenant Worden was taken, wounded and unconscious, from his ship, and escorted back to Washington by the same friend who had suggested his name—an officer on duty at navy headquarters. At this friend's house he was cared for.

On the morning after the Battle at Hampton Roads, President Lincoln and the members of his Cabinet held a meeting to consider the various aspects of the battle, and the naval officer was called in, as a witness of the battle, to describe it.

"Where is Lieutenant Worden now?" asked the President.

"At my house, sir," replied the officer. The President reached for his hat, and a moment later the meeting adjourned.

"I don't know what you gentlemen are going to do," he said, "but for my part I am going to pay my respects to the young man who fought that battle."

He walked directly to the sick-room where Worden lay, blindfolded and in great pain. Without speaking, he reached out his great hands and folded them over one of Worden's. Some one told the lieutenant that it was President Lincoln who had come. "You do me great honor, sir," he said President Lincoln stroked his hand.

"You need no man to do you honor, lieutenant," he said, "for you have done great honor to yourself and your country." In all his life thereafter Admiral Worden declared that nothing ever moved him as did the grasp of the President's hands and the deep, thrilling sympathy in his voice. In the course of that visit President Lincoln told the lieutenant that promotion was awaiting him.

The Closing Words of Lincoln's First and Second Inaugurals

Of the first, delivered March 1, 1861:

"I am loth to close. We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

Of the second, delivered March 4, 1865:

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

I turn, then, and look to the great American people, and to that God who has never forsaken them —February, '61

Gentlemen and Fellow-citizens: I presume you all know who I am; humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been selected by my many friends to become a candidate for the legislature. My politics are short and sweet; I am in favor of a national bank, I am in favor of the internal improvement system and high protected tariff These are my sentiments and political principles If elected, I shall be thankful; if not, I will be all the same.—First political speech delivered at Poppsville, Sangamon Co, in 1832.

Wild Game Dying Out.

The rapid disappearance of wild game in the far West is causing Uncle Sam to sit up and take notice.

The biological survey recently made an exhaustive report as to the big game conditions and the prospect in general, and while conditions were found good in some States, the report from other haunts of big game was not so optimistic.

As a matter of fact, between the game hogs, the ranchers who insist on having wild meat out of season, and bands of marauding Indians from various reservations, wild game in the West is traveling at a rapid pace toward extinction Most of the States have poor laws, which vary greatly, and these laws are enforced only spasmodically. It is almost impossible to secure the conviction of any rancher who kills wild game out of season. Juries in the sparsely settled mountain communities will never go vict and, in consequence, State officers have become discouraged and rarely prosecute. The tourist who happens to kill a grouse out of season, or whose ignorance of local game laws, leads him into some such blunder, is made the "goat." The chap who happens to have an undersized trout in his creel is fined heavily, while the local resident, who may be making a practice of killing mountain sheep upon which there is no open season in most Western States, is allowed to carry on his work unmolested, because no conviction can be secured in a local court.

Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, and Utah suffer from the depredations of Indians, who care nothing for the white man's game laws The Indians kill right and left, and, on their deer hunting expeditions, does and fawns as well as bucks fall victims to their guns. There is another influence at work, against which the most stringent laws in the world would be unavailing—the rapid settlement of the open range.

Antelopes, in particular, have suffered from the encroachment of the settler Colorado has had no open season on antelopes for several years, but these animals are steadily disappearing. The plains country east of the Rocky Mountains has been put under fence until little of the range has been left for the antelope. As a result, the State of Colorado has had to feed the few remaining bands of these beautiful creatures nearly every winter. The best of the range has been taken up by settlers. The antelopes are unable to find sufficient natural feed, and are driven by hunger to the very farmyards of the ranchers. The ranchers do not have more than enough feed for their stock and are compelled to call upon the State for protection, as the antelopes play havoc with haystacks. The State has fed the antelopes, but it is noticed that the number of animals is steadily dwindling, and it will be only a short time until there are no more left on the high plains, where they once roamed by thousands.

Fish are little better protected than other forms of wild game. The fish laws of the Western States vary to a remarkable degree, and little real protection is afforded under them. It is the same old story difficulty in securing a conviction in local courts. Dynamiters, and seiners ply their calling, and are seldom caught and never convicted. Wyoming, which has the finest trout stream in the West, unless exception be made of the Gunnison in Colorado, has no closed season on trout. Fishermen report big catches in spawning time, when the fish should be left undisturbed. If there are any laws regarding the screening of irrigating ditches such laws are never enforced, and one hears of 10 and 12 pound trout being caught by farmers' boys in irrigation ditches If somebody is to be entertained, the citizens of an enterprising town in the haunts of the big trout will give a "fish fry" For a day or two everybody in town will turn out, and the stream will be whipped to a foam. The laws regulating the size of the individual catch will be openly violated, and when the day of the "fry" arrives there will be a veritable orgy, with thousands of trout forming the feature of the feast. The finest trout streams in the world are being depleted rapidly and fishermen who visit the North Platte and the Laramie every season report that those streams are showing the effect of Wyoming's lax enforcement of the laws.

The condition of the elk in Jackson's Hole is largely due to the constant hunting of the animals in localities. Thousands of elk have drifted from Colorado northward in the last few years, being frightened out by the settlers, who have hunted them in season and out. Elk are great travelers, and when disturbed will go long distances in the endeavor to shake off danger Fleeing from the populated mountain districts of Colorado into Wyoming, they have at last drifted to the sparsely populated Jackson's Hole country. The additions to the large elk herd that has always fed in the Jackson's Hole and Yellowstone park country have proved too great for the natural range to support. Wyoming has had to feed the elk, and finally this problem of caring for the animals has grown so acute that Uncle Sam has been called upon for aid, and at the last regular session of Congress several thousand doallars were appropriated, to be spent in caring for the elk Had the elk been properly protected from the first, no such situation would have arisen.

It has been proposed to remove several thousand of the Jackson's hole elk to Colorado and Montana, But old hunters claim that such a move would be folly, as the elk would drift back to their old feeding ground, and in a year or two conditions would be as bad as ever. Apparently the only solution of the problem, according to officers of the biological survey who have the matter in hand, is the removal of parts of the elk in small numbers to various parks and private games preserves, where they will be under fence. This means a long step toward the extinction of the elk, for those animals do not thrive well in captivity, their nature being too restless to stand close confinement.

Owing to difference in the game laws of various States, and lax enforcement of the same, game birds are disappearing. Wild geese that could be killed in great numbers in the Rocky Mountain States a few years ago, are now a rarity. Some of the "game hog" pictures, taken by men who love to pose before the camera in the midst of their trophies, go a long way toward telling the details of the tragedy.

The tragedy of the buffalo is familiar to all. There is only one "outlaw" herd in this country, which numbers about 75 head, and which is supposed to be part of the herd owned by Michael Pablo, of Roman, Mont. There was a small herd in Lost Park, Colorado, but the last chapter in the history of that herd was written when the State confiscated a number of skins and heads, in the possession of a hunter, and sold them for $1,085.

Mountain lions, wolves, coyotes, and bob cats are responsible for a part of the decrease in wild game in the Western States. These predatory animals have actually shown an increase, in spite of liberal bounties offered for their destruction. Mountain lions are especially skillful in killing deer and elk. They have wrought great damage in Yellowstone National Park—so much so that professional hunters are employed in the national forests adjoining the park and spend much of their time pursuing mountain lions with packs of specially trained hounds. Wolves and coyotes play havoc with the antelope on the plains in winter All Western States have standing bounties on the heads of these animals, but so hard are the wolves and coyotes to trap they remain a constant menace to the wild game as well as to the flocks and herds of Western stockmen.

The problem of saving the wild game in the West is difficult to solve, but it is not impossible of solution. Evidently the simplest way is to have the Government take the matter in charge. The "game hog" has a wholesome fear of Federal officers that local officials fail to inspire. Convictions could be secured against local residents in the Federal courts, whereas such things would be impossible in local courts. The extension of the national forests has done much to preserve the wild game. Forest rangers who are deputized as game wardens have brought many prosecutions which have ended successfully. Next to absolute control by the government, cooperation between the government and the State would be effective. A more uniform system of game laws on the part of the States, and an awakening of public sentiment in behalf of State authority would be beneficial. As it is, game protection in the last haunts of the creatures of the wild is merely a farce, and one of the choicest heritages of the people is being shamefully wasted.—Denver Correspondence New Orleans Times-Democrat.

King Richard and the Minstrel.

"Many, many years ago," said daddy, beginning his story for his children, Jack and Evelyn, "there was a king in England named Richard. He was brave and fond of wars and fighting—so fond, in fact, that he went to other countries to fight. One time, returning from a war, his ship was wrecked near the country of the Duke of Austria, who did not like King Richard. Soon afterward the duke caught the king and put him in prison. "For more than a year the people back in England did not know what had become of their king, for in those days, it took long for news to get from one country to another. There were no railroads or steamboats or telegraphs or telephones. At last, however, a story reached England that king Richard had been put him into a prison in some far away country, but no one knew which country it was.

"Now, in England there lived at that time a minstrel or singer who was a friend of the king. His name was Blondel. He had a fine voice and was a good musician, and he and the king had often sung together. When Blondel heard that the king was a prisoner in a strange country he made up his mind to seek the king. So he went to all the foreign countries he could think of, singing wherever he went the songs which he and Richard knew. You see, he thought that if the king heard one of the songs he would answer.

"After many months Blondel reached Austria. He stopped one day in front of a great, gloomy castle, kept by a man who was a great friend of the Duke of Austria. There a peasant told Blondel that a prisoner of high rank, whose name the peasant did not know, was kept imprisoned, and Blondel felt sure that he had found King Richard. When the owner of the castle heard that a good singer was outside he invited him in to sing and play and gave him a fine dinner and many presents. Thus it was that one day Blondel had the chance of singing outside the castle. He noticed a small window in the castle wall high up Standing in front of it, he sang a song which he felt sure King Richard would recognize. You may imagine how happy he was to hear the King's voice singing the second part of the song after Blondel had sung the first part.

"That was all that Blondel wanted at that time. He hurried home to England and told the people the name of the castle in which their King was locked up, and the people soon afterward made the emperor of Germany order the Duke of Austria to set the King free. When King Richard reached England one of the first men to greet him was his friend Blondel, for this is a true story."—Sel.

IT is beginning to look as if the running down of impostors who simulate deafness, dumbness and general stupidity, has a beneficial effect that does not terminate with the welfare of the deaf.

The public at large is being benefitted. Any body knows that. Warning the people not to bestow alms upon these pseudo deaf-mutes, benefits them in the amount withheld from the fakirs.

But, through the energy of Mr. Howard, another phase of the matter has been revealed. The latest "deaf and dumb" panhandler that Mr. Howard had arrested in Duluth and sent to prison, has been recognized by the police as a "yeggman," which is the police nomenclature for men who go about the country robbing and stealing wherever and whenever they can. This fakir is supposed to be the advance agent of a gang of robbers, and his particular business was to select the places for robbery and get information that would make the robbery easy and safe.

Probably there are many more of this class who pretend to be "dummies" so as to gather money from the sympathetic and information for bands of plunderers at one and the same time. If our readers will try to get their local papers to take up the story told below, it may do much to prevent the depredations of a criminal class. Read the subjoined, and them pass it on to your local newspaper, with a request to print:—

IMPOSTORS.

Patrolman Hinricks made a better arrest than he realized Saturday morning when he brought Edward Parker into headquarters in response to a complaint of the Associated Charities, charging him with begging.

Parker has a number of aliases and a criminal record as long as his arm. He is characterized as "yegg." He has been arrested on suspicion of blowing safes and for robbery and begging in numerous cities. The facts were discovered by Gust Lahti, who has charge of the local Bertilion system, after he finished "mugging" Parker Saturday afternoon.

In Duluth Parker was posing as a deaf-mute, who asked alms that he might raise enough money to start a small news stand. His paper stated that he had lost his speech and hearing two years ago after a severe attack of scarlet fever.

The police believe that Parker was using the deaf-mute "gag" as a "stall." It is well known that before yeggs blow a safe they send a man ahead to locate a "plant." They think that Parker was acting in such a capacity, and that had he not been arrested one or two safes might have been cracked in Duluth in the near future. Several suspicious characters have been run out of town lately, and it is not unlikely that Parker may have been working with them.

But he will not do any work for the next two months, at least. Saturday he was sent to the county jail to serve a term of sixty days for begging. When he gets out the police will take care to see that he does not linger about here any considerable length of time.

Courtenay Dinwiddle, secretary of the Associated Charities, takes this case as an excellent illustration of the advisability of reporting beggars to the Associated Charities. Speaking of the matter he said to day:

"The case of Edward Parker who posed as a deaf-mute and was arrested and convicted on Saturday is an excellent illustration of the wisdom of immediately reporting cases of begging to the Associated Charities. Although Parker had been operating in Duluth for two or three days none of the many people of whom he had begged had made any report to us until he applied at the home of a clergyman on Saturday morning. We located him within a few minutes after the report came in, and he was arrested just as soon as we could secure a policeman for that purpose.

"The police have discovered that Parker is an impostor with a criminal record. To assist such men not only encourages fraud and wastes the money of those who give, but is a grave injustice to the large body of self respecting, law-abiding deaf-mutes who are endeavoring to earn an honest living. Through making it easy for such impostors to keep up their profitable begging expeditions many gain the impression that all deaf-mutes are beggars. This also reacts on the honest laboring man who may be in need, as those who have been 'stung' by an impostor are apt to regard even the honest man with suspicion.

And here is how the lesson is driven home, in a communication from Jay Cooke Howard to the Duluth Herald:—

In the Monday Herald, under "Gleaned Along the Police Run," is an account of a dangerous "yegg" criminal, who has been begging about town for two or three days, pretending to be deaf and dumb. The good people of Duluth have been warned time and time again that every one of these deaf and dumb beggars is an impostor, and it seems passing strange that they continue to hand out their goo money to these people. There is a saying that 'Fools and their money soon part,' and it would seem to be borne out by the fact that these people can so easily ply their nefarious imposition upon a community that has been so often warned.

The extent to which this graft is being carried can be realized when one considers that in 1911 five arrests were made in Duluth and three other impostors were known to be in town, but were not caught. Two of these were women. One of them was known to have begged the length of Michigan Street but was not reported.

One's conscience may not be troubled by refusing aid to such people, for one can call up the Associated Charities and report the matter. If, by any chance, the person is deserving of aid, he will be in the hands of those who know how to aid him. If he is a crook, the community will be well rid of him.

How many of you know that there are over thirty industrious and respectable deaf and dumb people right in this town? You never see them. They are busy making a living and are not different from other people. There are very few of you who have not seen these impostors, and many of you have given out your money to these supposedly "poor deaf and dumb folks who have to beg because of their affliction." In the very act of handing out money to these impostors you are actually, though possibly unconsciously, misjudging a certain respectable and industrious class of fellow citizens. When you see one of these beggars, report him at once to the police or the Associated Charities. If it is a woman, report her just the same. A fraud is a fraud whether in pants or petticoats.

By the will of the late Mary Ann Stafford, the Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes gets one thousand dollars, as well as the residue of the estate after payment of several special he guests. We understand this legacy is "in trust for the Gallaudet Home for Aged and Infirm Deaf-Mutes."

Assemblyman Cuvillier has introduced a bill to have all the schoolboys in the State of New York of twelve years of age and over learn the manual of arms and be brought up so that they will be prepared to be soldiers.

The bill has been sent to President Egerton L. Winthrop of the Board of Education for his approval or disapproval. Mr. Winthrop is still considering the matter.

The bill provides that the adjutant general shall issue books of instruction, directing the drilling and schooling in the manual of arms in each public school in the State of all boys of twelve and over. They are to take part in not less than twenty-four drills and instructions in the manual of arms, including parades, inspections, and muster during each school term.

The adjutant general is to detail a commissioned officer of the National Guard, who shall from time to time visit each State public school to "instruct, inspect, parade, and muster," all the boys.

The officer to be paid acording to rank as provided by military law when on active duty.

In Memoriam.

EDWARD BEVERLY NELSON.

The Executive Committee of the Empire State Association of the Deaf, respresenting the Association, desire to offer a tribute to the memory of their beloved friend and fellow-associate, Edward Beverly Nelson, who has answered the final summons, and has gone to a higher, grander plane.

Therefore, we record:

First That in his removal the Association has lost a true and valued friend.

Second Our high esteem for him, and our testimony to his sterling worth and character, his consecrated loyalty to the deaf in general, and the indomitable will and spirit that were characteristic of him.

Third Our regard for him as a faithful and unselfish friend, one worthy of our utmost respect, and whose work will live forever to inspire and ennoble.

Fourth That God's eternal will is always just, and while we bow in humble submission, we none the less mourn for our departed friend who has now entered the House not made with hands, eternal in the beautiful realm above.

Fifth That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family, and ask God's richest blessings upon them; and we direct that copies of this record be sent to the bereaved family, published in the Register, the DEAF-MUTES' JOURNAL, and be spread on the minutes of the Association.

CHARLES B. KEMP.

GALLAUDET COLLEGE.

Dr. Draper lectured before the students, Friday evening, February 2d, on "The Spacious Firmament on High." Those who know Dr. Draper will need no further comment upon the lecture. The usual social hour took place immediately after Dr. Draper completed his remarks, and was enjoyed by everyone present.

The next literary treat in store for the college will be the reading by Dr. Fox, of New York, on February 9th. Dr. Fox will deliver "Richelieu," said to be his masterpiece at sign-making. At the conclusion of the reading, the Literary Society will tender Dr. Fox a reception. The committee in charge of the reception consists of Messrs. Gardner, '12, Gledhill, '13, Hunter, '14, Moore, '15, and Rendall, P. C.

The Senior Class has chosen Friday evening, February 16th, as the date of the annual Senior Literary Meeting. Messrs. Anderson, Harris and Struck, constituting the Senior Class Committee on Program, have arranged "A Night with Shakespeare." An essay upon the "Immortal Bard" himself, will be read by Mr. Anderson. The class will then present the "Court Scene," and will close the program with a declamation of Hamlet's Soliloquy.

The monthly business meeting of the Literary Society took place last Saturday morning. Routine business was transacted and the committee on books reported the addition of eighteen new volumes to the Society's library.

We bet a stewed prune, Wilhelm Ferdinando Schaefer, Captain of the recoubtable Reserves Basket-Ball Quint, will assume a more beseeming modesty henceforth.

Last Thursday Capt. Wilhelm led his cohorts to the fray with Western High School, and then led them back again with the long end of a 44 to 6 score.

Wishing to do Wilhelm mete honor, a certain Senior instructed the rodents to convey him, Cinderella-like, to the East Wing refectory, and introduce him to the Princesses Charming therein. (We suspect he don't know the names of half of them.) The rodents were somewhat tardy in executing the certain Seniors' behests and with a commendable spirit of Brotherliness Wilhelm came to his assistance Only for a minute though!

Wilhelm hasn't stopped blushing yet.

The E. N. D. C. will give the second of the annual series of plays by the organization, on March 2d The Committee on Play is now considering several pieces.

We believe correspondents have failed hitherto to report the new compulsory study inaugurated by the Faculty this year. The Freshmen are expected to take two hours a week in Business Methods, under Dr. Draper.

Business Methods have been taught here all along, but only as an optional extra. The Faculty's decision to make the study compulsory is to be commended, as the average undergraduate is too apt to fail to appreciate the importance of a knowledge of twentieth century business methods.

Rumor hath it that our beloved friend, Dr. Gallaudet, will visit Kendall Green again later in the month. We hope rumor hath it right.

Miss Winifred Northrop, '08 Normal, will come to Kendall Green February 15th, to take the place of Miss Talliaferro in the Kendall School. Those who know her will be pleased to see Miss Northrop again.

Dr Draper is busily engaged in preparing the new College Catalogue. He reports that it will contain a number of new photo-plates, and hence will present a more attractive appearance.

RODE KAPPA GAMMA GOAT.

The annual Kappa Gamma Fraternity conclave took place in the Shrine Saturday night, January 27th, when six candidates rode the traditional "Billy," and were initiated into the mysteries of the ancient Hellenic order. The new Brothers are William Goreth Durian, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Alpha William Patterson, of Arkansas, both from the Sophomore Class; Ralph Raymond Decker, of Kansas, Frederick George Fancher, of Fanwood, N. Y., Lawrence Erle Johnson, of Belleville, Ontario, Canada, and Frederick Antonio Moore, of Kansas, all from the Freshman Class. After the sacred rites were administered to the candidates, all, both old and new brothers, repaired to the college refectory, where a delightful lunch was served and tales of good old days exchanged. The Committee on Initiation was composed of Grand Rajah Birck (Chairman), Bros. Arras, Linde and Blanchard.

A large attendance of the Alumni brothers is expected at the annual grand Kappa Gamma Fraternity banquet on Saturday, February 10th. Among out-of-Washington Alumni, who signified their intention to pay their homage to Vishnu are: Bro. Dr. Fox, '83, of New York, Bro. Murray Campbell, '92, of New York, Bro. George Faupel, '07, of Frederick, Md., and possibly Bro. Jones, '76, of New York, and Bro. Holiday, '10, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Alumni brothers desiring to attend the above banquet, will please notify the Tahdheed, Bro. S. W. Harris, Gallaudet College.

BASKET BALL

Owing to the Annual Kappa Gappa Conclave, noted elsewhere in these columns, there was no game for any of the college teams, January 27th.

GALLAUDET RESERVES 40
CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY FRESHMEN 13.

Wednesday afternoon, the 30th, the Reserves smothered the C. U Freshies to the tune of 40 to 13. The score about tells the story of the game. C. U. put up a gritty article of basket ball, but showed a lamentable lack of team work. At times, however, they showed up to advantage.

The Reserves played a fast clean game and easily ran away from their opponents. In the matter of goals, Foltz and Hughes showned to best advantage, both lads doing some brillant shooting. Big "Rausmit-em" Rasmussen and little Captain "Wilhelm" Schaefer also played in flashy form at the guard points. They broke up C. U.'s offense at every stage of the game.

Reserves line up: Hughes, l.f.; Foltz, r.f.; Fancher, c.; Rassmussen, l.f.; Schaefer, r.f.

That boy Rassmussen has developed wonderfully. Last Fall we pronounced him an "acidless lemon" but we take it all back. With this year's experience, Rass ought to make the Varsity next year.

RESERVES 44 WESTERN HIGH SCHOOL 6.

There is nothing to tell about the second game with W. H. S., which took place Thursday, February 1st. Gallaudet simply held a relay carnival and rung up points at will, on the scholastic quint's basket. The first period score was 20 to 2; second period 24 to 4.

Foltz, Hughes and Fancher, shone on the offense, while Shaefer and Rassmussen played their usual clever game at guard.

Even the Washington sporting writers are throwing bouquets at the Reserves. In their respective classes, the Reserves are putting up a better game than the Varsity. Five games in succession, out of six, is going some.

Manager Lapides is negotiating with Y. M. C. A. for a game in the Kendall Green Gymnasium, on Washington's birthday.

P. S.—Whoop! la!

Reserves 49 Epiphany Church 11

Saturday afternoon, in about the roughest game of basket-ball ever seen here, a game that would have been considered rough had it been a combination of foot-ball, baseball, prize-fight and "rough and tumble," the Ducky Reserves went up against the Epiphany Church quint and extracted just forty-nine points to eleven from themselves.

For downright dirty work we doff our bonnets to Epiphany. To start the fun, they inaugurated a rumpus over which rules should be investigated first. A flip of a coin decided in favor of Collegiate. Score 14 to 9. In the second half under A. A. U. Rules, the visitors' choice—score 35 to 2.

When it comes to picking stars, we give this list—Schaefer, Rassmussen, Foltz, Fancher and Keeley. At some time in the game each man shone up like a North Star ten times multiplied.

BALTIMORE, MD., February 3, 1912.

Gallaudet 9 Loyola College 11

In a fiercely played game of forty minutes duration., Loyola College was barely able to pull the contest out of the fire by the score of 11 to 9. The game was marked by determined guarding on both sides. The Loyola forwards both failed to register a single goal. The first half of the game ended 3 to 2 in favor Loyola. Gallaudet quickly forged to the front in the second period and kept there until the last few minutes of play, when the home team tied the score and in the last half minute rung up the winning basket.

EAST WING.

Saturday afternoon, February 3d, our basket-ball team faced the Ingram girls again. The result was 38 to 8 on the enemy's side. We see signs of hope in that score for the games to be pulled off in the near future, because the Ingramites always scored higher than forty points in the games before. The sporting editor of the Herald in his review of the game, said "The Ingram girls played better—but the Gallaudet girls beat them in looks."

Have you ever heard of baldheaded angels? Miss Rosy, '14, is the authority for that—at least they say she is.

We wonder if we'll ever be allowed the pleasure of coasting by moonlight. When will the time come when we can fly down the slippery hill with the moon as our pilot?

Some of us are already longing for Spring. O hers hope we'll have anther week of cold weather. No wonder the weather man is having a mighty hard time trying to please everybody.

Saturday evening Mr. Hooper made us his debtors for life by taking us to "Dixie" just when we began to give up in despair.

Several Co-eds were so impressed by Dr. Draper's talk about stars that they stayed up very late to study Orion, the Bears and other celestial bodies.

Miss Sharp, '12, Miss Fandrem, '12, and Miss Sherman, '13, were invited to the reception given in honor of Miss Wiegand, of Baltimore, by Miss Waters, in the city, Friday, the second of February.

Washington, D. C.

Calvary Bible Club held its monthly meeting in the Sunday school house of Calvary Baptist Church, on the evening of January 17th. Mr. G. C. Erickson was booked for a lecture, and gave an excellent rendition of the late Rev. E. E Hale's story "A man Without a Country." The next meeting will be held on the evening of February 21st. We are informed that President Flood has arranged an excellent program for that night, so be sure and come and bring your friends along.

Mr. I. H. Benedict, who has just passed his eighty-seventh milestone has been very ill with an attack of Bronchitis. For a time grave fears were felt for his recovery, but he seems to have rallied, and if a relapse does not occur, it is thought that he will pull through. His host of friends are earnestly hoping that this will be the case, and that he will soon be able to be around again.

Mrs. Charles Keyser and Mrs. J. W. Elliott are mourning the loss of their father, who died a short time ago after a lingering illness. The whole community joins us in extending our heartfelt sympathy for their bereavement.

Mr. John Ellegood was recently called to his old home in Salisbury, Md., to attend the funeral of a sister-in-law.

Misses Kipp and Fish, who were among the 1100 Census Clerks that lost their jobs not long ago, because of the failure of Congress to appropriate sufficient money to keep up the work, have left for their homes in New York and Connecticut respectively.

We were all exceedingly sorry to see them go, for during the time that they have been among us they have by their kindly ways made themselves very popular. The good will of the populace goes with them. Mr. Hayes and Miss Cowles, who were also left out, are still in town, and expect to remain here for some time, hoping that they may be re-instated or that some other job will turn up. Only two deaf people now remain on the Census force; they are Messrs. R. J. Stewart and W. P. Sonder.

Mrs. W. P. Sonder entertained the Ladies Card Club, on the evening of February 3d. The club was organized some time ago with Mrs. W. E. Marshall as President. The club meets every Saturday night in rotary order at the homes of the members. They find it a very pleasant means of whiling away some of the long winter evenings. Here's hoping that they do not start to scrapping, as some people with weak nerve have predicted they would do.

Miss Sadie Dailey gave a small dinner party in honor of Misses Kipp and Fish shortly before they left the city. The out-of-town guests present were: Mrs. Faast, Miss Crandall and Messrs. Duval and Schaffer, all of Baltimore.

Mr. J. C. Dowell, our genial groceryman, had the misfortune to have his feet badly frost-bitten during the recent cold snap. He is now able to be about again.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hannan will sail from Baltimore for Europe, some time during the latter part of March. They will travel through Germany and France, finally arriving at the French Capital, where Mr. Hannan will enter one of the famous art institutes, where he will continue his studies of his chosen profession, sculpture. Mrs. Hannan is now at Atlantic City, where she expects to remain for some time.

Mr. W. E. Marshall, who has been on the clerical force of the Southern R. R Co for several years, with offices at 13th St., and Pennsylvania Ave. N. W., was recently transferred to the Company's new and commodious building located at 2d and D Sts., N. E., which is only a stone's throw from his own domicile.

Mr. Carl Rhodes, finding time hanging heavily on his hands during the cold weather, has gone to work in his brother-in-law's grocery store, where he will remain till spring comes around once more.

At a recent meeting of the Gallaudet College Alumni Association, held at the home of Mr. Beller, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mr. H. C. Merrill; vice president, M. R. J. Stewart; Sec'y and Treasurer, Mr. W. E Marshall.

MORE LIBERAL TERMS FOR NEW MEMBERS.

The following motion has been received from Mr. Freeman:—

CAVE SPRINGS, GA., Jan. 20, 1912.

MR. PRESIDENT:—I move that new members who join the N. A. D. between conventions, on payment of the initiation fee of one dollar, shall be entitled to full membership for one full year and up to the fiist of June of the following year if they join before March 1st. If they join between March 1 and June 1, they shall be entitled to membership to the first of June of the second year following the payment of the initiation fee.

This rule shall take effect immediately after its passage.

S. M. FREEMAN.

This motion is now before the Executive Committee, and is open for discussion until February 26th, 1912.

In accordance with Roberts' Rules, it is not necessary for a motion made in Committee to be seconded. This also will save work in conducting business by correspondence.

The object of the above motion is to give more liberal terms to new members. Under the present rules, if a person joins and pays $1.00 in February, his dues are only paid till June 1st, and on that date he will be asked to pay 50 cents more. Under the new rule the time is extended a whole year Thus:

One who joins in Feb., 1912, is paid up to June 1, 1913.

One who joins March 2, 1912, is paid up to June 1, 1914.

One who joins June 2, 1912, is paid up to June 1, 1914.

One who joins Feb., 1913, is paid up to June 1, 1914.

One who joins March 2, 1913, is paid up to June 1, 1915.

And so on.

The best time to join is between March 1st and June 1st. The object in making special inducements to join between these dates is that notices of annual dues are sent out at this time, and the publicity thus given it is hoped will induce new members to join.

Several have commented on the short time covered by the first payment, and this keeps some from joining. It is hoped the new rule, when adopted, will be popular and bring in many new members.

HOW TO PAY DUES.

Treasurer Freeman writes that his banker has given notice that he will charge 10 cents exchange for collecting checks. So if you send check, add 10 cents for exchange. The best way, however, is to send money orders. Address S. M. Freeman, Treas., Cave Springs, Ga.

MORE DISCRIMINATION AGAINST THE DEAF.

MUNICIPAL CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION OF NEW YORK CITY,
299 Broadway, 11th Floor, New York

Dec. 19, 1911.

"I regret to inform you that your affliction makes you ineligible to compete in the examination for Book-binder."

The above information was given to Mr. Adam Singer, a deaf-mute who applied for examination under the New York City Civil Service Commission.

The N. A. D. has been asked to take a hand in the matter, and it will endeavor to do so. Discriminations have been reported from Chicago, Los Angeles and New York. There is work for the N. A. D. Let us make the Association a strong one with the means behind it to do real active work.

Stenographic Report of Funeral

MARION, IND., Feb. 2.—A typewritten stenographic report of the funeral of Clarkson Willcutts, merchant, shot by a highwayman, today was presented to the murdered man's son, Calvin Willcutts, who is deaf.

Grief-stricken because he could not hear a word, the son sat through the ceremony, but unknown to him, for his consolation, a stenographer in an adjoining room copied prayers, hymn-texts and sermon.

Cecil Fordyce, charged with the murder, is said to have confessed to the police.

NEW YORK.

News items for this column, should be sent direct to the DEAF-MUTES' JOURNAL Station M, New York.
A few words of information in a letter or on a postal card is sufficient. We will do the rest.

Last Saturday night, Febuary 3d, the Brooklyn Division No. 23, N. F. S. D, held its third annual Masquerade and Fancy Dress Ball at Imperial Hall, 360 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Imperial Hall has been somewhat changed in its arrangments, as extensive alterations were made last Summer, and last Saturday in looking around the big crowd of deaf-mutes assembled there to make merry, one could not help saying that if a Hall was to be made to order for the deaf, it would be hard to improve upon Imperial Hall.

The crowd began to arrive long before the Hall was to open, and they kept coming till almost midnight, this, too, despite the fact that in New York there was a big attraction—at the 8th Regiment Armory on 94th Street, Manhattan, where the Fanwood Cadets gave an exhibition.

There must have been about five hundred present, of whom about eighty were in costumes representing various characters from Uncle Sam to the present day creation of "Joy and Gloom."

H. PIERCE KANE,
State Organizer.

At eleven o'clock the maskers marched in review around the room several times, to enable the judges to select the prize winners. Though there were eight judges, representing as many outside organizations of the deaf, their task was not an easy one.

There were thirty prizes to be awarded. The judges succeed in selecting ten ladies and ten gentlemen and three children, whom they considered to be entitled to the prizes—but aside from character costumes their identity was unknown to the committee on awards.

There was plenty of dancing throughout the night, and from a fine balcony, those who did not care to dance conversed and looked down at the dancers.

There was also a large room connecting with the ball room, where refreshments were served, and dancers could go after the conclusion of each dance.

The other arragements were perfect, hence the Committee had very little trouble about the courtesies and attention due to their guests. If any of the vast crowd present did not have a good time, it was his or her fault.

The Committee of Arrangements was headed by Jacob Keiber, Jr., having as helpers Mike Auerbach, Erich Berg, P. Coulon and A. Duerr. They were kept busy throughout the evening, and to them much of the success of the affair is due.

The Brooklyn Frats. have lately added social membership to their ranks, and we noted five of these who are members: Messrs. Henry L. Juhring, E. A. Hodgson, I. N. Soper, M. Heyman and C. Bryan.

The officers of Brooklyn Division, No. 23, N. F. S. D., for the ensuing year, are: Alex. L. Pach, President; John D. Shea, Vice-President; Louis A Cohen, Secretary; S. Rosenthal, Treasurer; Theodore I. Lounsbury, Director; A. C. Berg, Sergeant-at-Arms.

Trustees—H. Pierce Kane, W. L. Bowers and Archibald J. McLaren.

The music was furnished by B. Hilgeman's Band.

The dancing, which by the way was kept up till early morning, was under the direction of Mr. George I. Lounsbury, as Floor Manager, and Clarence Hollman as Assistant Floor Manager.

Reception Committee—Frank E. Fluhr (Chairman), Geo. S. Porter, Alex. Dezendorf, Paul E Kees, Harry Leibsohn, F. Berg, Geo. N. Donovan, Jacob Landau, A Hanneman, Wm. Butcher, Stafford Dingman, John F. Keller, Albert Balmuth, H. B. Schuermann, H. Hanneman, Fred. Einsfeld, Ralph M. Lawton, James McKenna, George Yoerger, John W. Jeynes, A. Chaimowitz, Joshua Levy, John J. O'Brien, Harry Schnurmann, Nathan Wolk, Gustave Matzart, Wm. Dietrich, Fred. Hering, Wm. Nachumson, Ed. Gundersdorff, R. M. Robertson, Wm. Atkinson, Albert Wokal, R. Grutzmacher, A. Heischober, Wm. Heffernan, John H. Keiser.

A good many of the deaf are on the sick list. Louis Lowenstein has been confined to his bed for nearly a month, with an abscess on his foot. Robert McVea is in Bellevue Hospital with a broken leg. Mrs. Evans lies at her home in Brooklyn, suffering from a paralytic stroke. Miss Lorigan is in St. Peter's Hospital, convalescing from a severe sickness. Others, with minor ills due to the cold weather, have been kept away from work for days at a time, but the foregoing are the serious cases.

Mr. Edwin S. Mosbacher, of Arverne, was glad to read in your JOURNAL of January 25th that the Clark Deaf-Mutes' Athletic Association intends to build a bungalow on the site of their old camp, and hopes that they will be able to accomplish it; he lives only one mile away, and would certainly take great pleasure in visiting it frequently.

Mrs George Warren (nee Kortright) died at her home in Brooklyn, on Tuesday, January 23d. She was educated at Fanwood. She leaves a husband and two children to mourn their loss.

Rev. Dr John Chamberlain took a severe cold while attending a funeral in New Jersey, and has been confined to his bed for a week. Latest reports are that he is getting better.

Moses Beesman, of Philadelphia, was in New York over Sunday. He visited the Deaf Mutes' Union League, and had a fine time generally.

Miss Minnie Pancoast is at Atlantic City for a couple of weeks, with Mrs E. E. Hannan, of Washington, D C.

William T. Moran, of New Orleans, La., expects to be in New York this summer, probably in July.

LYNN MAN INVENTS DEAF-MUTES "TELEPHONE"

William E. Shaw of Lynn has invented an electrical arrangement which flashes letters and numerals which deaf persons can read. He calls it "deaf-mutes' telephone." On an ornamental board, which may be attached to a wall of a room, Shaw has arranged 36 incandescent lamps, and through the operations of a keyboard connection is made with any lamp, and thus words are spelled or figures announced.

Over each lamp is a letter of the common alphabet, the lamps and letters being arranged in regular order. The same rule is followed with the lamps denoting figures. Each lamp is separately connected with a keyboard, which may be a help to a person or placed within easy reach of several who desire to converse, Pressure on a key makes contact with the lamp, and words are rapidly spelled. The keyboard is, of course, connected with the electric lighting system in a residence. Where such facilities do not exist, batteries of sufficient power would provide the current.

OHIO.

[News items for this column may be sent to our Ohio News Bureau, care of Mr. A. B. Greener, 993 Franklin Ave., Columbus, O.

February 3, 1912.—The Advance Society (Columbus) held its regular meeting, Tuesday evening, with Mr. William Toomey, the new president, presiding. The annual report of the treasurer was presented and approved. The balance in the treasury showed $229.25. Several Committee reports were presented and disposed of. The Impostor Committee, through its Chairman, Mr. McGregor, reported that nothing had been done as a new administration of the city, came in with the new year and it was thought best to wait till it got settled into the business. Messrs. Ohlemacher, Zell and Showalter were appointed purchasing committee for the Home. Matters pertaining to the Social to be given February 17th, from 2 to 10 P.M., were talked over and arranged. Donations of candy, toys andcakes, will be acceptable. Admission will be free. A resolution was adopted to the effect that the treasurer limit the loans of funds not to exceed a year, and at legal rates of interest and with good security. Mr. McGregor was called upon and spoke upon the objects of the present State Constitutional Convention also upon the Initiative Referendum and Recall.

The Ohio Branch of the Gallaudet College Alumni Association, got together last evening in the library of the School and talked of college days, besides attending to some business. Mr. Ohlemacher gave report of the receipts and expenditures of the moving picture entertainment last month. The Branch's treasury was enriched $24 03 after all expenses were paid.

A birthday anniversary letter, conveying congratulations and good wishes of the members to Dr. Gallaudet and signed by all the members, was sent to him. A subscription was also taken up for the Gallaudet Endowment Fund and sent to the Treasurer. This has been an annual custom of the Branch. Mr. McGregor gave some impressions of Dr. Gallaudet, formed while a student, interspersed with student incidents, and Mr Green followed, giving his experience along the same line. All the talk was informal and nearly all the members present, ten, joined in relating or recalling old times on the Green. It seemed like being back there again.

Thursday afternoon, the School team and the Commercial High School team played a basketball game, at the former gymnasium floor, and came out ahead, 43 to 19 Both teams played well in passing. It was a clean and interesting contest. Redman and Herrick starred for the O. S. S. D., while Weinman carried off the honors for the downed. Line up:—

Yep, 'tis settled, Brer Groundhog came out of his lair yesterday and went right back again. So six weeks more of winter are in store for us, larger coal bills and more discomforts. At this writing, Saturday evening, a snow storm is prevailing and the mercury going down, down to the zero point.

We have been favored with the second and third Annual Reports of the Virginia State School for Colored Deaf and Blind Children, at Newport News, by Superintendent Ritter. It is embellished with numerous cuts illustrating classrooms, buildings and farm scenes of the school. It was mainly through the untiring zeal of Mr Ritter that the school was established. He was made Superintendent of it and its successful carrying forward belongs to him The more honor to him, since he is the only deaf Superintendent of a school now. There were 73 pupils present October 1, 1911, twenty nine of whom were blind. The expenditures for the past year were $20,556.89.

President Taft was in the city for a couple of days this week, to help dedicate the enlarged post-office building at State and Third Streets. At the public reception in the Great Southern Hotel, two deaf persons at least had the honor of taking the President by the hand, the reporter and Mr. Bogart. Supt. Jones was also there.

Mr. Leon Odebrecht, of the High School, who was given leave of absence last fall, returned to his position the 1st inst., looking greatly improved. His family is still in Michigan and will remain there to the close of the term.

Peter Gillooly, of Woodlawn, Pa., boasts having travelled 6021 miles between Saturday and Monday mornings, through the year 1911. These trips were made visiting friends or relatives.

Miss Annie Callison is over in Zanesville, visiting her mother.

Mr. A. H. Schory was at the Home Sunday and entertained the residents with a religious talk. Everybody was well up there, and everything in good shape.

"Gaze Northward," and Boost the N. A. D.

On reading Mr. Jay Cooke Howard's letter in the JOURNAL of January 11th, under the heading "Gaze Northward," I was at a loss whether to swear or laugh. But when I came to the date, January 1st, the laugh prevailed; for did it not bring up pleasant memories, as well as conjectures as to what Duluth ladies serve their New Year's callers!

Jay Cooke has got his "facts" a little mixed, which is pardonable. As one of these alleged "facts" he tells his admirers that they must not praise him for his splendid work in chasing imp stors, but should praise the head of N. A. D., and he has this "fact" di ect from Seattle. Not so! Praise Jay Cooke all ye mundane host! Glory, laud, and honor our grand Chief of Police. But remember that it was the N. A. D that got Jay Cooke chasing impostors, and that the N. A. D. needs and deserves a boost, while Mr. Howard gets the praise.

Nearly every school paper has commented on Mr. Howard's Impostor work; but with one or two exceptions no mention whatever has been made of the N. A. D. In a private letter to Mr. Howard, I commented on this fast. As Mr. Howard has brought the subject to public notice, I thank him for this opportunity to state the facts correctly.

Several months ago I informed Mr. Howard that I should be glad to have an appropriation from the treasury, made for defraying the expenses of his work He replied both privately and publicly that he did not need any money. A short time afterward, however, he issued a public appeal for funds to run an ad in the Detective. I promptly called his attention in a private letter to my former proposition, and the fact that the N. A. D. was now in position to furnish a limited amount for the purpose. He then told would be contributors not to send him any money. He also informed me that several contributions had been returned, and that he could easily have secured all the money he needed It was hardly necessary to return the money, and it was not done by my order. But as I have stated publicly it is better that all moneys should be sent to the Association treasurer, and disbursed by the Executive Committee. If those who contributed money will send it to the treasurer, S. M. Freeman, Cave Springs, Ga., with the stipulation that it shall be used in suppressing impostors, the money will be so used, and due credit will be given in the treasurer's reports.

I have been asked why Mr. Hunt was allowed to solicit for the Industrial Bureau. Mr. Hunt had ambitious plans for his Bureau, and at the time he started the N. A. D. was in no position to afford him any aid. He issued the appeal for funds on his own initiative, and as he has reported all receipts and expenditures to me and has always made it plain that his work was for the N. A. D., I have seen no occasion to interfere. The N. A. D. needs money to carry on its work, and is not in a position to refuse contributions made in good faith through any responsible channel.

Mr. Regeusburg has received some subscriptions for the Colorado report in the same way, and the Moving Picture Fund was collected by special collectors. But if every one holds out his hat for contributions the deaf will naturally get tired of it. Next December on Gallaudet's birthday all will be asked to contribute to the Gallaudet Monument repair fund, as decided by the Executive Committee under instructions from the Association. Meanwhile no other moneys should be asked for except contributions to the general treasury through membership and donation.

You may jump on Olof Hanson, as many have done; you may ridicule him, as Jay Cooke tries to do; you may drag him through the mud: but while I am president the banner of the N. A. D. will be held aloft.

I have a definite object in view. I want to make the N. A. D an organization that can be of real help the deaf at all times. Many are helping me. Other from whom support might properly be expected are not I hope the latter will change and put their shoulders to the wheel. What the N. A. D. needs is more money. To get more money we need more members. Come and join the N. A. D.

The Matrimonial League.

The baseball player gazed softly at her.

"Would you sign with me for the game of life," he whispered tenderly.

"That will depend somewhat on your batting average and your capacity for making home runs," she replied.

The blindness of love accounts for the extreme element of feeling in the tender passion.

BOSTON

The Bostonians are delighted to have the Rev. Mr. Heffion here for a service every month. A warm welcome has been given him, and his service has drawn large crowds.

We are glad to see the renewed strength given this cause—not only for the Gospel's sake, but for the assurance that the sign language is gaining a stronger foothold. Many persons, including the writer, were surprised at the young minister's mastery of the language.

Some time since the stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Malone, and left a bouncing girl. Congratulations

Miss Gilpatrick, of Worcester, who entered the Old Home last Spring, died at the Home on Sunday, January 21st, from general disability, the day of her death being her 77th birthday. Her remains were shipped to Worcester, after a brief service by Lay Missionary Frisbee, a trustee of the Home. The services were conducted at the undertaker's establishment in the presence of a few persons. Few of our people knew of the death until burial was over.

The February social of the Boston deaf at Presbyterian Vestry is postponed from second Wednesday to third Wednesday, February 21st, and will be a George Washington affair. This date will allow the remote people to come out, for the holiday. The Committee counts on a large number of the most popular ladies, who wish their names omitted for the present. The last social was deluged by young folks, and was one of the best ever held. Remember Wednesday, February 21st. Same vestry used during past years—social every month as usual. At at March social one of the most distinguished deaf men in America will be the attration—Mr. Jay Cooke Howard, of Duluth, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Howard are both expected to speak. Mrs. Howard is a hearing lady and the daughter of Prof. Draper, of Gallaudet College.

A colored deaf-mute boy was cremated after he and a little girl had set their home in Winchester on fire last week A State School for the Deaf would have saved him.

The famous White Orpington hen owned by Mrs. Wyand, won the $50 Challenge cup at the Boston Show. She is from William Cooks & Son, England, and from a long line of winners in Crystal Palace and Madison Square, the finest blood possible to obtain. Two Orpington cockerels, highest winners in England, have just arrived. Eggs from these yards sell readily at $5 per setting, up to $2 each, with the demand greater than the supply.

The home of William Clinton at Mattapan was the scene, last Saturday night, of an interesting party and social. Some sixty-odd young folks attended.

Rev. Mr. Wyand is in receipt of quite a long letter from H C. White, Phoenix, Arizona, owing to the fact that the minister has been receiving one hundred letters of purely personal nature requiring answer, with no friends to supply postage He has been required to announce that all letters of any kind excepting pertaining to church work and pure benevolence, will receive answer only when stamps are enclosed for same.

The new order of affairs in the local Sunday meetings is fast becoming popular and all have become accustomed to the change—if it can be called such. There has been no change in time, place, nor form of service. The only change is in Boston Society and that change is the final outcome of the original understanding under which Rev. Mr. Wyand came here. At the opening of the year, Rev. Thomas, Chairman of the Trustees of the Boston Society, informed him that the Trustees were heart and soul interested in his work, but that they had no funds and no way of getting them to warrant any arrangement of any kind with any one, therefore their support to the system of services under the Alliance would close, and the nest-egg left pigeonholed, the trustees to give Rev. Wyand every individual help and encouragement to continue the work. Both the Trustees and the Evangelical Alliance have found that people will contribute quicker and more liberally directly to the minister for this work than to either body. The writer has it directly from persons who have helped the church work, that it is the belief that the Boston Society used the funds for literary, social, and other doings, with only a sprinkle of religious or church work. People give to our minister directly because of the Alliance's numerous works. Rev. Thomas in a letter to Mr. F W. Bigelow, Chairman of the Deaf Committee of Boston Society, under date of January 25, 1912, says in part:

"I hope very earnestly indeed, and urge it more than anything, that all the attendants at our former services enter right into the work with Brother Wyand under the name of the "Alliance work with the Deaf," and do all they can to make the work a success. I believe in the Lord's leading, and know that Bro. Wyand has his heart in the work. He is certainly the smartest and best man we can possibly get. And if he can pull things together and get enough to live on in our community and establish a flourishing church work, it will be something for which we would all be very grateful. It would be something to be proud of."

In a letter to Mr. Wyand from Mr. Woodbury, Treasurer of the Boston Society, under date of February 2, 1911:

"I have left in the Treasury, February 2, 1911, $512.07 this will not go a great ways. Now I heartly approve you work and what you are doing, but I can not stand back of you for anything beyond the amount I am holding as Treasurer. It seems to me, my dear Mr. Wyand, that either of the societies (Evangelical Association of New England; or Evangelical Alliance of Greater Boston) ought to take up your work and put it through. They have the machinery, and Rev. Thomas and myself will be glad to turn over the money to either society if they will use it for your work alone. Or I will still hold the money and pay it out as long as it lasts, but I think some one ought to take up your work and assist you. I have more than I can do, I will be glad to go with you to see Rev. Sayford (Evangelical Association) or Rev. MacPhie (Evangelical Alliance), or any one else if we can get them interested. I certainly trust that you will have great success and be able to put your work upon a proper basis."

In a letter from Mr. Woodbury under date of April 22, 1911, it is shown the Alliance had agreed to succeed the Trustees, but suspended the certain action at wisdom of lawyers: "It has been decided by the lawyers, owing to the way the money was left to the Society, that I had better retain the Treasurership of the fund. That would not interefere with any arrangement that you have made, except you will be paid by me instead of Mr Bryant, as long as the funds in my possession last."

In a letter under date of January 2, 1912, Mr. Woodbury says: "I wish we had money enough so that the work could have gone right along as it has, as I think yon have done good work. You know the story, the funds gave out, and that is all we could do. I sincerely hope that you will make it go in the new way. Wishing you a prosperous New Year—not only for the New Year but for the balance of your life."

The Boston Society now has about $175. The letter of Mr. Woodbury, of February, 1911, one year ago, showed the society had $512. The trustees received about $60 from Charity Association addresses. During the past three years, Mr. Wyand through the Alliance furnished a church free except sexton fee—a saving to Boston Society of two dollars per Sunday for three years. He inaugurated the monthly social system which has helped the society several hundred dollars Some credit is due him for the collections given by the increased crowd which attended his services over the old system.

Mr. Woodbury in special conference with Mr. Wyand, was told by the minister that the work would go on through not a cent in sight. He remarked that he admired the minister's pluck and faith, and forthwith headed a list with the leading cash subscription. Through the alliance office the chain of over 450 Evangelical Ministers in New England have been communicated with and requested to bring this special work to bear on the people. Already financial help has been secured beyond that received by Boston Society during past three years. The Alliance Committee has fixed a plan to secure fifty contributions at ten dollars each and one hundred at five dollars each. If these are obtained the work is assured. Rev. Wyand was consigned to this field by the bishop of his church, at the request of the conference, and his rights are established beyond all question. The work is now concentrated, and will go on even on a greater scale, extending over New England.

This will be joy to the friends of the sign-language the real Christians. If the alliance drops the work and Rev. Wyand does not continue it on under his church, the affair ends, as no Home Mission here can get a vote in this line as many ministers are oral supporters. The alliance is firm in its stand with Mr Wyand, and gives him full use if its machinery to get the needed money.

Rev. Wyand will hold service in Lawrence first Sunday in March, May, July. In Worcester first Sunday in Feb., April, June. Services in Lynn will soon be revived, as well as other new cities

Police Commissioner Omeara has been J. Cooke Howardized, judging from a recent letter from him. Beware—O take care more room in Deer Island farm than Boston Streets.

Marriage.

HOUGHTON—PENDLETON.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Glenna Shibley, in Knoxville, Tenn., Mrs. Hattie Baylor Houghton was united in holy matrimony to Mr. Wm. Silas Pendleton, leading Jeweler and Diamond Merchant, of Bristol, Va., on January 31st, 1912, and immediately took the Southern Flyer for Washington, Baltimore and New York, on a honeymoon trip of two weeks.

The marriage was a private affair, only the close relations being present, with the Rev. J. W. Michaels, as the officiating minister.

It was also a romantic wedding. The couple first met each other while pupils at the Virginia School for the Deaf, thirty-five years ago, and took a liking for each other, but the then Miss Hattie Baylor's parents placed her in the Tennessee School for the Deaf, at Knoxville, where she met Professor Louis A. Houghton, a graduate of the New York School and also was among the first graduates of Gallaudet College, and in course of time they were married. Young Pendleton then vowed he would never marry, and he became shy of women. After leaving school he and his brother opened a little watch repairing shop and later engaged in the jewelry business, and by application and courtesy grew up with the town Bristol, where they are the leading jewelers and diamond merchants in a city of between 25,000 and 40,000 inhabitants.

Prof. Houghton died some five or six years ago, and Mr. Pendleton again pressed his suit, with the result as above. They are of the same age, and though Mrs. Pendleton has a married daughter is well preserved and is considered a beautiful woman, and Mr. Pendleton is a prominent personage—with all they are a fine couple. They will be at home to friends at Bristol, Virginia, after February 15th, 1912.

The Power of the Press.

A contemporary printed this the other day:

"Owing to the overcrowded condition of our columns a number of births and deaths are unavoidably postponed this week.

It does not follow because a man carries his wife's photo in his watch that he would keep away from a "burlesque show" if some one gave him passes.

FANWOOD.

EIGHTH REGIMENT LAST SATURDAY.

Those who did not witness the exhibition by the Fanwood cadets at at the Monster Military Carnival and Reception, held at the Eighth Regiment Armory last Saturday evening, missed one of the most interesting entertainments in all New York. Of all our appearances at different armories, the drill given at the 8th was by far the best.

The battalion went by surface cars to the Armory. The cars were boarded at Amsterdam Avenue and all remained until 94th Street was reached. We did not go by any special cars, but took them as they came along, the cadets in each car being accompanied by a staff officer.

At 94th Street the companies lined up, and after all were accounted for, Major Van Tassell gave the order to put the companies in motion. A block was traversed before the regimental building loomed up and we passed in.

The Major then gave fifteen minutes to practicing the various evolutions which required to be explained in order to ascertain our positions in the regimental review.

After that the entire battalion stood at ease while the Hebrew Orphan Asylum band boys rendered their many musical selections. A little later the St. Ann's Guard cadets, followed by the boys of the Trinity Church company, marched in. Our boys enjoyed watching the others, and comparing the points most probable to result in victory to either company. (They were to compete for a cup later on.)

After the review, the Butts Rifle Drill was gone through. Then the companies were allowed to witness the rest of the events until it was time for the Retreat, the seventh feature on the program.

Upon the conclusion of our part, all were marched to a separate room and were regaled with cake and ice-cream cones. After that we left for the School, the hour being late, arriving about half-past one Sunday morning. For convenience the program is attached.

A FORMER FANWOOD OFFICIAL

The following has reference to a former superintendent of the New York Institution in the olden days when the Institution was divided into an educational and an administrative department, respectively. Dr. Carson during his short term of office, was highly esteemed by all at the Institution, and the deaf boys and girls who came under his care regarded him with kindly affection. The subjoined is taken from the Syracuse Journal of January 30th :—

"Official recognition of the services of Dr. James C. Carson as superintendent of the Syracuse State Institution for Feeble Minded Children was made in the annual report of the State Board of Charities to the Legislature. Dr. Carson has served the state for nearly 30 years. His resignation takes effect April 1. His successor will be Dr. O. H. Cobb."

"The State Board says of Dr. Carson : "Dr. Carson has been one of the leaders in all movements for the better care and training of the feeble minded. * * *

"His retirement comes at a time when in many states he can see his suggestions taking practical form in the segregation of the feeble-minded. Like his honored predecessors, Seguin and Wilbur, he will leave to the institution an influence of permanent value. Calm, considerate and kindly to the unfortunate children committed to his care, he was in this regard a model superintendent, beloved by the inmates and respected by all associates with him in the management of the institution."

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Sunday morning Dr. Fox spoke eloquently on the value of little things and what comes of them, illustrating his subject as he alone can. Prof. Jones conducted the afternon services. There was no evening story, all being allowed to retire early so that those who comprised the battalion might make up for their yesterday night tardiness in visiting Slumberland.

NOTES

After losing four straight candlestick pin-bowling matches to other crack teams from various leagues, the C. A. C. bowling team won its first match from the Boston Council, No. 6, Knights of De l'Epee last evening. The game was a remarkably hard-fought match, as there has been a very close difference in matter of points between these two teams from the very start to finish. The C A. C. alleys were well packed up with deaf people like sardines in a tin can, however they were amply well repaited for wintessing the battle royal between these two teams

GREENSBURG, PA.

At her cosy residence in Youngwood, Mrs. John F. V. Long, gave a sumptuous dinner to a few of her invited guests, on Sunday, January 21st, in honor of her fiftieth birthday anniversary. The day passed off quietly, though pleasantly, and those present conversed together over their school days reminiscences

Among the guests present were : Mrs. Weaver, of Youngwood ; Miss Nellie Leis, of Jeannette ; Messrs. Carl Ling and George Ingland and ye local scribe.

Word received from Casselman, Pa., was to the effect that the brother of Mr. E. C. Harah, a graduate of Gallaudet College, Class '89, departed this life at his home in the above named town on Wednesday, January 11th, 1912, due to stomach trouble, from which he suffered for so long a period. The dead man underwent an operation at one of the Pittsburg hospitals last month, but it did not turn out successful. Our friend Edwin has the most heartfelt sympathy of a large host of friends far and near in his cheerless bereavement. He expects to depart within a short time for South Dakota and try to dispose of the ranch for a good consideration, and if successful, will return to dear old Pennsylvania, where he will spend the balance of his life on his farm.

With thanks your scribe regretfully could not accept an invitation to attend a banquet, held by the PittsburgtGallaudet College Alumni Association, at Seventh Avenue Hotel, in that city, on Saturday evening, February 3d, in honor of our beloved friend, Dr. Edward Miner Gallaudet, President Emeritus of Gallaudet College.

Miss Dorothy Pool, the bright daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pool, of Hunker, had a severe attack of la grippe, but she is, at the present time, recovering.

Mr. Widaman, of this place, mourns the loss of an aunt, whose death took place in Goshville, Armstrong County, Pa , some time ago, in the ninety-third year of her age, resulting from infirmities. Deceased was the last survivor of the Widaman family, and possessed wonderful memory of the past events, considering her advanced age.

James G. Pool, a progressive farmer, living in the vicinity of Hunker, is, we are pleased to say, conducting a dairy business with a high degree of success, and has quite a number of customers. Recently his brother and himself obtained one hundred acres of land, a short distance from Mr. Pool's homestead, where they expect to plant corn the coming Spring. His son, Eddie, who is an ambitious boy is devoting most of his time to the raising of chickens, and expects to win several prizes at the Annual Greensburg Poultry Show next year. Ye local visited the ever-hospitable Pool farm-house last Saturday, and was treated to some choice winter apples.

Politics is evoking considerable interest among the deaf in the community in this coming Presidential campaign.

The Gallaudet Memorial.

It is proposed to create a memorial to the late Rev. Thomas Gallaudet, D.D., by the erection of a Parish Building for St. Ann's Church for Deaf-Mutes. The present Church is situated on 148th Street, just west of Amsterdam Avenue, and is built some twenty-five feet back from the line of the street to permit the erection of such a building as above indicated, which will form a facade to the church edifice and be a center of religious and social life amongst the silent peoples. Dr. Gallaudet hoped during his lifetime to see the erection of this building, which would have completed the church with which his name has always been associated. This was not permitted, and it is suggested as a most fitting memorial to him that this work be now undertaken. St. Ann's Church is used wholly for the deaf-mutes.

The new building will occupy a plot of ground about forty-five feet along the street front and twenty-five feet in depth. It will be three stories in height, with a basement, and will be used for the social, religious and industrial needs of the deaf-mutes of New York. The amount required for "The Gallaudet Memorial Parish Building" will be about $30,000, and the building itself, in its position and purpose, will form a conspicuous monument to him whose life was devoted to the silent peoples. They themselves heartily endorse the memorial.

To my Wisconsin Convention Fraters of 1911:

This is a little talk on the Photographic feature of the convention. All that you can have as tangible souvenir of the happy week we spent at Delavan are photographs from the imperishable image on the plates.

The plates not developed at Delavan are even better than those from which proofs were shown.

The groupings were as follows :

The Whole Body in one photograph.

The Alumni of Gallaudet College.

(This negative is far better than the one from which proofs were shown at Delavan.)

The Superintendents and Principals Group.

(There were two made, that of Monday being unusually excellent, but on account of seven Superintendents not appearing, another group was made on Tuesday at noon. In quality, from the artistic standpoint, Monday's is far better. However, your can have either or both, but kindly specify which one.)
